Course prerequisites

Teaching strategie

Expected learning outcomes in terms of
Knowledge and understanding on:	Objectives of the course involve skills in the analysis and synthesis of information: that is to acquire, organize and reformulate data and knowledge from different sources: attending students will be required to organize themselves into groups to approach topics emerging from the course with the support of different sources (paper and / or audiovisual).
Applying knowledge and understanding on:	Objectives of the course involve skills like solving problems: that is to apply what has been studied in a real situation, identifying the areas of knowledge that best allow it to be addressed. In addition to the particular ways in which the oral exam will take place, this ability will also be estimated in relation to the selection and approach revealed by the attending students in identifying personalized in-depth studies: the attending students, in fact, will apply the methods and techniques studied to the study of particular agreed historiographic nodes, agreed with the teacher. The final exam itself will focus, in the case of attending students, on verifying what has been learned during the course, focusing on critical skills and methodological tools acquired.
Soft skills	a. The ability to formulate judgments independently: that is, to interpret information with a critical sense and make consequent decisions: students will experience this activity within the aforementioned groups and in the relationship between them and the teacher. b. The ability to communicate effectively: i.e. transmitting information and ideas in both oral and written form in a clear and formally correct way, expressing them in appropriate terms with respect to specialist or non-specialist interlocutors in the sector: attending students will present written and / or oral reports that are likely to be publicly displayed as part of the course. c. The ability to work in groups: that is, coordinating with other people, including those of different cultures and professional specializations, integrating their respective skills: attending students may be asked to form working groups. d. Resourcefulness: that is, knowing how to develop innovative ideas, design and organize their implementation, manage the necessary resources and be willing to take risks to succeed: students will have to independently identify the strategies for selecting the sources.
Syllabus
Content knowledge	Knowledge of : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- the different forms of party and political organization;</li> <li>- the main issues of the Italian republican history, the international context and the related implications on the evolution of the party form;</li> </ul> Ability to: autonomously apply the concepts of democracy and populism, as well as the main categories created to read and interpret the action of political forces (loyalty, semi-loyalty, disloyalty, subcultural roots, coalition, etc.), to the study of contemporary history

Assessment
Assessment methods	Oral examination

Assessment criteria	The final assessment is determined by the candidate's knowledge of the core elements of the programme and the relative deviation from these 'expected learning outcomes' during the examination. The exam, which is held orally, certifies the extent to which the preparation and knowledge acquired by the candidate reflect the effective fulfilment of the goals indicated above as distinctive of the course (acquisition of historical method, ability to set up an autonomous reasoning, to develop an effective narrative, to identify priorities and highlight causal links, etc.). The goal is pursued both by verifying the candidate's ability to elaborate on what he or she has studied in the course of preparation and by offering him or her new elements on site in order to verify their ability to use them.
Final exam and grading criteria	The mark is given in thirtieths. The minimum mark for passing the test is 18/30. In the case of 30/30, an additional distinction may be awarded.
