Learning Objectives	The course is aimed at developing the students' skills in reading and interpreting literary works but also their knowledge of literary reception beyond national and cultural boundaries. That way the students' historical and literary skills regarding comparative literature will be broadened.
Course prerequisites	The students should know about periodisation and the principal issues regarding the history of European literature.

Teaching strategie	Front lessons, use of multimedia support
Expected learning outcomes in terms of	According to Dublin Descriptors the expected learning outcomes can be described as follows:
Knowledge and understanding on:	During the course the students acquire theoretical and methodological skills useful for analysing literature beyond linguistic and geographical boundaries and the reception phenomena of literary works in different contexts and artistic media.
Applying knowledge and understanding on:	By means of analysis of literary texts the students acquaint themselves with one or more cultures other than the Italian culture and develop critical contextualisation skills useful for understanding and interpreting the phenomena, also more recent ones, that affect and involve other cultural systems and artistic media.

Soft skills	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Making informed judgments and choices• Literary analysis develops reflection and the line of thought since it requires attention, perspective viewing and knowledge of the linguistic-cultural system in question.• Communicating knowledge and understanding• The literary texts selected from several national literatures offer the students the possibility of reflecting on the different cultural contexts. In such a way the students, assisted by a widened knowledge of different cultures, will be able to work out a more aware, correct and efficient communication.• Capacities to continue learning• Reading literary works taken from different cultures strengthens the students' ability to summarise and repropose contents by helping them create a line of thought and an argumentation as well as a supervised and efficient use of their language. Exercising such skills is also useful for applying the theoretical and methodological issues discussed during the course to different contexts.
Syllabus
Content knowledge	The course begins with a theoretical frame concerning among others the disputed concept of intermediality, its origins and evolution and its relation to the literary field. The relation between artistic media and cultural context will be considered as well. After introducing the different typologies of intermedial phenomena, the lessons will focus on selected case studies as examples of some specific categories of intermediality: literature/theater, painting/literature, literature and cinema.
