

COURSE OF STUDY: HISTORY AND SOCIAL SCIENCES LM-84

ACADEMIC YEAR 2023-2024

ACADEMIC SUBJECT: HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY OF HUMAN RIGHTS

General information
Year of the course
Academic calendar (starting	First Semester 25.09.23/13.12.23
and ending date)
Credits (CFU/ETCS):	6
SSD	History of Philosophy M-FIL/06
Language	Italian
Mode of attendance	Attendance optional but strongly recommended

Professor/ Lecturer
Name and Surname	Francesca R. RECCHIA LUCIANI
E-mail	francescaromana.recchialuciani@uniba.it
Telephone	+39 080 5714164
Department and address	Dipartimento di Ricerca e Innovazione Umanistica
	Secondo Piano Palazzo Ateneo - Piazza Umberto I, 1 Bari
Virtual room	https://teams.microsoft.com/l/channel/19%3aAH2FA_g7jRzsGhgHOx6nUE5N
	pIE98nmFrkh3xHIDwj41%40thread.tacv2/Generale?groupId=ea3d1f7a-ffc8-450c-89f4-6d6d1a392094&tenantId=c6328dc3-afdf-40ce-846d-326eead86d49
Office Hours	Wednesday/Thursday by agreed appointment by e-mail

Work schedule Hours

Learning Objectives	Acquisition of the ability to easily orient oneself in philosophical questions concerning human rights and intersectionality. Acquisition of the ability to distinguish, in the thought of the authors treated, the elements of historical-interpretive elaboration from those of theoretical innovation.
Course prerequisites	There are no specific prerequisites for taking the course, with the exception of those required for admission to the degree courses in Philosophy, as set out in Article 3(1) of the teaching regulations (good general culture ability to read and understand texts and documents and to express oneself adequately in Italian; general knowledge of philosophy, history and a foreign language).

Teaching strategies	The organisation of the course includes frontal lectures open to dialogue and discussion with the students and in-depth seminar meetings, with the possible support of experts in the field. The chosen texts, which deal with central themes of contemporary reflection, will provide a broad overview of the philosophies of the present, their methodologies and problematic issues.
	During the lectures, the reference texts of the examination will be explained, verifying from time to time, through discussion and dialogue with the students, the comprehension of the themes addressed during the lectures.
	Through interaction with the students, discussion and critical reading of the texts will also be practised during the lessons. Students will also be invited to produce a short presentation during the course that explores the topics covered and present it to the class for discussion.

Expected learning outcomes in terms of Knowledge and understanding on:	- As far as knowledge and comprehension skills are concerned, at the end of the course the student should be able to (a) easily orient themselves in the history of contemporary philosophy, with particular reference to "gender issues" and feminist and queer philosophies; (b) recognise, through in-depth study of the thought of the authors and of the texts considered in their historical context, their belonging to schools, currents, philosophical trends, with particular reference to the 19th, 20th and 21st centuries (c) to develop autonomous research perspectives, also through the use of secondary literature, around the themes of the recognition of differences and gender self-determination in modern and contemporary philosophies and to juggle with specialist vocabulary.
Applying knowledge and understanding on:	- In terms of applied knowledge and understanding, by the end of the course the student will have acquired specific skills in being able to read and appreciate both elaborated texts and specialised critical literature related to the themes, problems and theoretical production of the authors studied, showing that he/she has acquired skills suitable to undertake further training and/or introductory paths to professions related to cultural productions.
Soft skills	- Autonomy of judgement As regards the development of autonomy of judgement at the end of the course, the student will have acquired mature skills and critical capacities that encourage, in the context of philosophical reflection on feminisms and gender studies, the formulation of personal ideas and self-directed paths of research and interpretation of specific issues in the context of contemporary reflection.
	- Communication skills By the end of the course the student will have acquired: (a) the ability to be able to argue effectively in oral form, as well as to argue autonomous theoretical points of view based on a solid knowledge base; (b) a high degree of familiarity with teaching and research languages and methodologies using both traditional and multimedia communication systems.
	- Capacities to continue learning (a) elaborate and mature methods and tools for autonomously reading and analysing contemporary philosophical texts; (b) the ability to continuously update and deepen one's historical-philosophical skills useful for the continuation of one's studies or for employment in the cultural field.
Syllabus
Content knowledge	UNARMED BODIES: VIOLENCE AND RACISM

	Themes of the course: Long and deep are the processes of dehumanisation that allow racist violence to fall upon the 'altered' body and even seek legitimacy in the laws and interpretative categories of reality. A philosophical reading of those processes allows them to be deciphered and deconstructed by providing useful categories to ensure that the ghosts of the past do not return to haunt the present.
	Topics covered:
	- History of racisms
	- What dehumanisation means
	- Intersectional approach to identity axes
	- Theories of violence.
Texts and readings	1) E. Levinas, Essere ebreo, Inschibboleth 2017;
	2) H. Arendt , Il razzismo prima del razzismo , Castelvecchi 2018;
	3) C. Guillaumin , L'ideologia razzista , il melangolo 2023;
	4) E. Dorlin, Difendersi. Una filosofia della violenza, Fandango 2020.
	December and advacading so Recommended readings:
	C. Volpato, Deumanizzazione. Come si legittima la violenza, Laterza 2011;
	P. Hills Collins, Intersezionalità come teoria critica sociale, UTET 2022.
	In addition only for non-attenders:
	 «Post-Filosofie, Rivista di pratiche filosofiche e di scienze umane»,
	n. 15, 2022: "Jean-Luc Nancy. Pensare instancabilmente" (selected essays), available online on the CIMEDOC UNIBA platform here:
	http://ojs.cimedoc.uniba.it/index.php/postfil.
Notes, additional materials	Additional teaching materials will be provided during class.
Repository	Scheduled texts are available at the department libraries
	https://opac.uniba.it/

Assessment
Assessment methods	The examination is conducted through an oral interview on the contents of the program. The exam schedule is published on Esse3 and at this link: https://manageweb.ict.uniba.it/corsi/filosofia/appelli-e-commissioni-desame To register for the exam, it is mandatory to use the Esse3 system.
Assessment criteria	The student must demonstrate the ability to construct an autonomous pathway on the topics covered, organising the discourse in a clear and linear manner, using and controlling the specific vocabulary of the discipline and demonstrating the ability to reason critically on the issues addressed. - Knowledge and understanding

The student must demonstrate - that he/she understands the main concepts addressed during the course; - to be able to explain and critically analyse the topics addressed in the course; - to be able to orientate himself/herself in the reference texts. - Applied knowledge and understanding The student should be able to - to choose and use the concepts and analytical tools covered in the course to develop an autonomous discourse on the topics dealt with; - to discuss critically and autonomously the basic issues related to contemporary philosophies and gender knowledge; - to distinguish the main methodologies and theoretical lines related to contemporary philosophies and gender knowledge, identifying their historical and cultural dynamics of reference. - Autonomy of judgement The student should be able to - to use autonomously the conceptual tools acquired during the course and to select the information needed for their contextualisation; - to distinguish the different forms of textuality and the differences in their processes of signification - to understand and distinguish the mechanisms of meaning production and their correlation with social, political, economic contexts. - Communication skills The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - The ability to communicate and discuss clearly the issues covered during the course; - The ability to share, elaborate, synthesise and argue his or her knowledge related to the discipline with propriety of language. - Capacities to continue learning The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - the ability to update and personalise one's knowledge and to orientate oneself within the scientific publications relating to the topics dealt with; - the ability to update and personalise one's knowledge and to orientate oneself within the scientific publications relating to the topics dealt with; - the ability to recognise the different approaches and methods of texts relating to contemporary philosophical issues. - The final grade is given in th
The student should be able to - to choose and use the concepts and analytical tools covered in the course to develop an autonomous discourse on the topics dealt with; - to discuss critically and autonomously the basic issues related to contemporary philosophies and gender knowledge; - to distinguish the main methodologies and theoretical lines related to contemporary philosophies and gender knowledge, identifying their historical and cultural dynamics of reference. - Autonomy of judgement The student should be able to - to use autonomously the conceptual tools acquired during the course and to select the information needed for their contextualisation; - to distinguish the different forms of textuality and the differences in their processes of signification - to understand and distinguish the mechanisms of meaning production and their correlation with social, political, economic contexts. - Communication skills The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - The ability to communicate and discuss clearly the issues covered during the course; - The ability to use the vocabulary specific to the discipline; - The ability to share, elaborate, synthesise and argue his or her knowledge related to the discipline with propriety of language. - Capacities to continue learning The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - the ability to update and personalise one's knowledge and to orientate oneself within the scientific publications relating to the topics dealt with; - the ability to recognise the different approaches and methods of texts relating to contemporary philosophical issues. Final exam and grading criteria The final grade is given in thirtieths. The exam is considered passed when the grade is greater than or equal to 18. Honors will be awarded to students who demonstrate that they have developed, among other required skills and abilities, independent judgment and the ability to learn.		 - that he/she understands the main concepts addressed during the course; - to be able to explain and critically analyse the topics addressed in the course;
The student should be able to - to use autonomously the conceptual tools acquired during the course and to select the information needed for their contextualisation; - to distinguish the different forms of textuality and the differences in their processes of signification - to understand and distinguish the mechanisms of meaning production and their correlation with social, political, economic contexts. - Communication skills The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - The ability to communicate and discuss clearly the issues covered during the course; - The ability to use the vocabulary specific to the discipline; - The ability to share, elaborate, synthesise and argue his or her knowledge related to the discipline with propriety of language. - Capacities to continue learning The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - the ability to update and personalise one's knowledge and to orientate oneself within the scientific publications relating to the topics dealt with; - the ability to recognise the different approaches and methods of texts relating to contemporary philosophical issues. The final grade is given in thirtieths. The exam is considered passed when the grade is greater than or equal to 18. Honors will be awarded to students who demonstrate that they have developed, among other required skills and abilities, independent judgment and the ability to learn.		The student should be able to - to choose and use the concepts and analytical tools covered in the course to develop an autonomous discourse on the topics dealt with; - to discuss critically and autonomously the basic issues related to contemporary philosophies and gender knowledge; - to distinguish the main methodologies and theoretical lines related to contemporary philosophies and gender knowledge, identifying their historical
The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - The ability to communicate and discuss clearly the issues covered during the course; - The ability to use the vocabulary specific to the discipline; - The ability to share, elaborate, synthesise and argue his or her knowledge related to the discipline with propriety of language. - Capacities to continue learning The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - the ability to update and personalise one's knowledge and to orientate oneself within the scientific publications relating to the topics dealt with; - the ability to recognise the different approaches and methods of texts relating to contemporary philosophical issues. Final exam and grading criteria The final grade is given in thirtieths. The exam is considered passed when the grade is greater than or equal to 18. Honors will be awarded to students who demonstrate that they have developed, among other required skills and abilities, independent judgment and the ability to learn.		The student should be able to - to use autonomously the conceptual tools acquired during the course and to select the information needed for their contextualisation; - to distinguish the different forms of textuality and the differences in their processes of signification - to understand and distinguish the mechanisms of meaning production and
The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired		The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - The ability to communicate and discuss clearly the issues covered during the course; - The ability to use the vocabulary specific to the discipline; - The ability to share, elaborate, synthesise and argue his or her knowledge grade is greater than or equal to 18. Honors will be awarded to students who demonstrate that they have developed, among other required skills and abilities, independent judgment and the ability to learn.		The student must demonstrate that he/she has acquired - the ability to update and personalise one's knowledge and to orientate oneself within the scientific publications relating to the topics dealt with; - the ability to recognise the different approaches and methods of texts relating to contemporary philosophical issues.
Further information	criteria	grade is greater than or equal to 18. Honors will be awarded to students who demonstrate that they have developed, among other required skills and Further information	