Prerequisite requirements	Basic contents of Social Psychology
Expected learning outcomes (according to Dublin Descriptors)	Knowledge and understanding This course aims at giving knowledge and understanding of basic notions in group psychology according to a psychosocial perspective. Psychosocial dynamics in daily life of small and large groups will be analyzed. Applying knowledge and understanding Theoretical and methodological discussion of learning contents will enable students to employ assimilated knowledges even in theoretical and practical contexts not directly examined. Making informed judgements and choices This course aims at developing understanding and elaboration of data belonging to different social groups in an autonomous way, in order to identify dynamics, functions and solutions for the system of "social group". Communicating knowledge and understanding Another aim is to promote the ability of communicating deductions about different social groups, but also about different theoretical and methodological models.

	Capacities to continue learning Learning skills consist of improving theoretical and practical contents by independently deepening them.
Contents	This course will be composed of two modules: the general module deals with some conceptual contributions of social psychology; the specific module deals with historical, theoretical and methodological contents of group psychology. In the first module, some emblematic research studies in social psychology are described as the basis for the explanation of social and group interaction. In the second module, group dynamics such as status, roles, norms, leadership, communication, influence, and members' experiences such as admission, socialization, belonging sense, participation and going out, are discussed.
