| Expected learning outcomes (according to | Knowledge and understanding  |
| Dublin Descriptors)                      | This course aims at giving knowledge and understanding of          |
|  | basic notions in group psychology according to a psychosocial      |
|  | perspective.   |
|  | Applying knowledge and understanding                               |
|  | Psychosocial dynamics in daily life of small and large groups will |
|  | be analyzed. Theoretical and methodological discussion will        |
|  | enable students to employ assimilated knowledges even in not       |
|  | directly examined contexts.  |
|  | Making informed judgements and choices                             |
|  | This course aims at developing understanding of different social   |
|  | groups' data in an autonomous way, in order to identify            |
|  | dynamics, functions and solutions.                                 |
|  | Communicating knowledge and understanding                          |
|  | Another aim is to promote the ability of communicating             |
|  | theoretical and methodological deductions about different          |
|  | social groups.   |
|  | Capacities to continue learning                                    |

|                     | Learning skills consist of improving theoretical and practical contents by independently deepening them.   |
