Contents	The second year course of English Literature focuses on some specific aspects of 18th and 19th British literary literature, and related contexts. Along with locating literary texts and cultural processes, special attention is devoted to their resonance texts in contemporary literature culture through several forms of rewriting and adaptation also in new media.
Course program	Title: Victorian Afterlife: rewriting Dickens in a Cross-cultural World Within the wider context of 19th century literature, this course focuses on Victorian Legacy and on the far-reaching resonances of Victorian fiction in contemporary culture. In

	particular, the course focuses on Great Expectations by Charles Dickens, which particularly addresses such thorny issues as the negotiation of identity across differences of class, nation and culture. The course will also focus on two one of the most remarkable examples of postcolonial texts ‘writing back’ to the English literary canon: Jack Maggs (1997) by the Australian novelist Peter Carey, and Mister Pip by Lloyd Jones. Both texts explore the notion of cultural identity in the relationship between the British Empire and its colonies.
