

Look at the sentences below. What types of conditional can you find in each sentence?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Look at the sentences below. What types of conditional can you find in each sentence?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Look at the sentences below. What types of conditional can you find in each sentence?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Look at the sentences below. What types of conditional can you find in each sentence?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Look at the sentences below. What types of conditional can you find in each sentence?

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to truths, scientific facts and (predictable / unpredictable) results of particular actions.
- conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an situation in the (present / past), which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and (predictable / unpredictable) results of particular actions.
- conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an situation in the (present / past), which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and (predictable / unpredictable) results of particular actions.
- conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an situation in the (present / past), which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- ..... conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an situation in the (present / past), which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an situation in the (present / past), which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the (present / past), which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the (present / past), which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is (likely / unlikely) to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate (possible / impossible) conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the (present / past).

Complete the rule:

If you heat water enough, it boils. Zero

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread. First

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world. Second

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish. Third

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + ,

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If + ,

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If + ,

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If + ,

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + present simple ,

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If +,

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If +,

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If +,

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + present simple , present simple

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If + ,

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If + ,

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If + ,

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + present simple , present simple

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If + present simple ,

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If +,

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If +,

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + present simple , present simple

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If + present simple , future with will

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If + ,

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If + ,

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + present simple , present simple

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If + present simple , future with will

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If + past simple ,

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If +,

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + present simple , present simple

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If + present simple , future with will

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If + past simple , would + base form

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If + ,

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + present simple , present simple

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If + present simple , future with will

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If + past simple , would + base form

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If + past perfect simple,

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences again. What structures do you need to follow for the zero, first, second and third conditional?

If you heat water enough, it boils.

Zero

If + present simple , present simple

If I go to the shops, I'll get some bread.

First

If + present simple , future with will

If I had the money, I'd travel around the world.

Second

If + past simple , would + base form

If I had known you were coming, I wouldn't have prepared the cheese dish.

Third

If + past perfect simple, would + have + past participle

- Zero conditionals are used to refer to general truths, scientific facts and predictable results of particular actions.
- First conditionals are used when we want to talk about something that is likely to happen in the future after a specific set of circumstances (e.g., if I go to the shops, I'll get some bread = I might not go to the shops, but that is likely to happen).
- Second conditionals refer to an imagined situation in the present, which is unlikely to happen.
- Third conditionals indicate impossible conditions in the past.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

1. Call me if you pass the exam.
2. If you work hard, you can pass the exam.
3. I will not pass the exam unless you study.

1. You can use the form in the clause in place of the tense.
2. You can also use a verb in the main clause in place of the tense.
3. Unless is used in the conditional and has a (positive / negative) meaning.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

1. Call me if you pass the exam.
2. If you work hard, you can pass the exam.
3. I will not pass the exam unless you study.

1. You can use the imperative form in the clause in place of the tense.
2. You can also use a verb in the main clause in place of the tense.
3. Unless is used in the conditional and has a (positive / negative) meaning.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

1. Call me if you pass the exam.
2. If you work hard, you can pass the exam.
3. I will not pass the exam unless you study.

1. You can use the imperative form in the main clause in place of the tense.
2. You can also use a verb in the main clause in place of the tense.
3. Unless is used in the conditional and has a (positive / negative) meaning.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

1. Call me if you pass the exam.
2. If you work hard, you can pass the exam.
3. I will not pass the exam unless you study.

1. You can use the imperative form in the main clause in place of the future tense.
2. You can also use a verb in the main clause in place of the tense.
3. Unless is used in the conditional and has a (positive / negative) meaning.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

1. Call me if you pass the exam.
2. If you work hard, you can pass the exam.
3. I will not pass the exam unless you study.

1. You can use the imperative form in the main clause in place of the future tense.
2. You can also use a modal verb in the main clause in place of the tense.
3. Unless is used in the conditional and has a (positive / negative) meaning.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

1. Call me if you pass the exam.
2. If you work hard, you can pass the exam.
3. I will not pass the exam unless you study.

1. You can use the imperative form in the main clause in place of the future tense.
2. You can also use a modal verb in the main clause in place of the future tense.
3. Unless is used in the conditional and has a (positive / negative) meaning.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

1. Call me if you pass the exam.
2. If you work hard, you can pass the exam.
3. I will not pass the exam unless you study.

1. You can use the imperative form in the main clause in place of the future tense.
2. You can also use a modal verb in the main clause in place of the future tense.
3. Unless is used in the first conditional and has a (positive / negative) meaning.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

1. Call me if you pass the exam.
2. If you work hard, you can pass the exam.
3. I will not pass the exam unless you study.

1. You can use the imperative form in the main clause in place of the future tense.
2. You can also use a modal verb in the main clause in place of the future tense.
3. Unless is used in the first conditional and has a negative meaning.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If I were you, I would study harder.
- If this text were easier, I would be able to understand it better.

- The sentences above are both in the conditional.
- We use for all persons (e.g., If I were you)
- The use of were in the second conditional is more (formal / informal)
- The use of was in the second conditional is more (formal / informal)

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If I were you, I would study harder.
- If this text were easier, I would be able to understand it better.

- The sentences above are both in the second conditional.
- We use for all persons (e.g., If I were you)
- The use of were in the second conditional is more (formal / informal)
- The use of was in the second conditional is more (formal / informal)

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If I were you, I would study harder.
- If this text were easier, I would be able to understand it better.

- The sentences above are both in the second conditional.
- We use were for all persons (e.g., If I were you)
- The use of were in the second conditional is more (formal / informal)
- The use of was in the second conditional is more (formal / informal)

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If I were you, I would study harder.
- If this text were easier, I would be able to understand it better.

- The sentences above are both in the second conditional.
- We use were for all persons (e.g., If I were you)
- The use of were in the second conditional is more formal.
- The use of was in the second conditional is more (formal / informal)

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If I were you, I would study harder.
- If this text were easier, I would be able to understand it better.

- The sentences above are both in the second conditional.
- We use were for all persons (e.g., If I were you)
- The use of were in the second conditional is more formal.
- The use of was in the second conditional is more informal.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If you work hard, you could pass the exam.
- If you left earlier, you might catch the train.
- If he had left earlier, he could've caught the bus.

- The conditional forms of modal verbs , , exist and are used in types of conditional sentences.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If you work hard, you could pass the exam.
- If you left earlier, you might catch the train.
- If he had left earlier, he could've caught the bus.

- The conditional forms of modal verbs can , , exist and are used in types of conditional sentences.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If you work hard, you could pass the exam.
- If you left earlier, you might catch the train.
- If he had left earlier, he could've caught the bus.

- The conditional forms of modal verbs can , may , exist and are used in types of conditional sentences.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If you work hard, you could pass the exam.
- If you left earlier, you might catch the train.
- If he had left earlier, he could've caught the bus.

- The conditional forms of modal verbs can , may , might exist and are used in types of conditional sentences.

Look at the sentences below and complete the rule:

- If you work hard, you could pass the exam.
- If you left earlier, you might catch the train.
- If he had left earlier, he could've caught the bus.

- The conditional forms of modal verbs can , may , might exist and are used in all types of conditional sentences.