Chair's Welcome

Dear colleagues,

We're pleased to welcome you to the Department of Political Science at the University of Bari "Aldo Moro" for the 7th Migration Conference. The conference is the largest scholarly gathering on migration with a global scope. Human mobility, economics, work, employment, integration, insecurity, diversity and minorities, as well as spatial patterns, culture, arts and legal and political aspects appear to be key areas in the current migration debates and research.

Throughout the program of the Migration Conference you will find various key thematic areas covered in 598 presentations by 767 contributors coming from all around the world, from Australia to Canada, China to Colombia, Brazil to Korea, and South Africa to Norway. We are proud to bring together experts from universities, independent research organisations, governments, NGOs and the media.

We are also proud to bring you opportunities to meet with some of the leading scholars in the field. This year invited speakers include Fiona B. Adamson, Markus Kotzur, Philip L. Martin, Karsten Paerregaard, Ferruccio Pastore, Martin Ruhs, Jeffrey H. Cohen, and Carlos Vargus Silva.

Although the main language of the conference is English, this year we will have linguistic diversity as usual and there will be presentations in French, Italian, Spanish and Turkish.

We have maintained over the years a frank and friendly environment where constructive criticism fosters scholarship, while being nice improves networks and quality of the event. We hope to continue with this tradition and you will enjoy the Conference and Bari during your stay.

We thank all participants, invited speakers and conference committees for their efforts and contribution. We also thank many colleagues who were interested in and submitted abstracts but could not make it this year. We are particularly grateful to hundreds of colleagues who served as reviewers and helped the selection process.

We also thank to those colleagues who organised panels and agreed to chair parallel sessions over three days. We reserve our final thanks to the team of volunteers whose contributions have been essential to the success of the conference. In this regard, special thanks are reserved for our volunteers and team leaders Rosa, Alda, Franco, and Aldo from the University of Bari, Tuncay and Fatma from Regent's University London, Fethiye from Namik Kemal University and Vildan from Galatasaray University, Ege from Middle East Technical University, Mehari from Regent's University London, and Gizem from Transnational Press London.

Our final thanks are reserved for the leaders of the University of Bari “Aldo Moro” and the Department of Political Science, President of Puglia Regional Administration and Mayor of City of Bari for hosting the Conference and for their generous support in enriching the Conference programme.

Please do not hesitate to get in touch with us through the conference email (migrationscholar@gmail.com).

Keynote speakers at TMC 2019

The Migration Conferences team are proud to have leading scholars in the field as keynote speakers whose details are listed below.

Markus Kotzur

We, the People on the Move – the Impact of International Human Rights Guarantees on Migration Governance

The need for managing migratory movements is evident. However, as desirable a reform of international law instruments, a new international organisation for migration and refugee questions (or at least binding treaty), the inclusion of an explicit right to asylum in human rights treaties, the taking up of climate refugees in the 1951 Convention, and, in particular, adequate normative responses to mass refugee phenomena would be, it seems rather unlikely that the international community is prepared to dare such far-reaching steps. Thus, a consistent “piecemeal engineering” in re migration governance will be the more promising alternative. The paper argues for activation existing human rights as effective instrument for a step-by-step development of a contemporary international migration regime.

Markus Kotzur is Professor of International and European Law, the Deputy Director of the Institute of International Affairs, and the Dean of Studies of the Faculty of Law at the Universität Hamburg. He is also the Director of Studies of the Master Programme "European and European Legal Studies" as well as the President of Europa-Kolleg Hamburg. Moreover, Prof. Kotzur is the Managing Director of the Institute for European Integration in Hamburg. He is also a co-editor of "Archiv des Völkerrechts". He has been as a Guest Lecturer, among others in Granada (Spain), Kolkata (Indien), Bayreuth (Germany). He is currently working on "Migration as a Challenge for International Law from a Human Rights Perspective".

Martin Ruhs

What asylum and refugee policies do Europeans want? Evidence from a cross-national conjoint experiment

(joint paper with Anne-Marie Jeannet, Esther Ademmer, and Tobias Stöhr)

Following the large increase in the number of migrants arriving and applying for asylum in Europe in 2015, EU member states have been engaged in highly divisive debates about how to reform the EU's asylum and refugee policies. A number of new and diverse policy models have been proposed, offering contrasting ideas about the meaning and scope of the right to asylum in Europe, resettlement of refugees from conflict regions, minimum standards of protection, assistance and cooperation with origin and transit countries, and responsibility sharing across EU member states. To debate and decide on competing visions for policy reform, it is crucial that we understand better the public's preferences for the various different dimensions of asylum and refugee policies. To this end, this paper conducts a conjoint survey experiment to study the asylum and refugee policy preferences of citizens, and how they vary across individuals, in six different EU Member States: Germany, Italy, Sweden, France, Hungary, and Poland.

*Martin Ruhs is Chair in Migration Studies and Deputy Director of the Migration Policy Centre (MPC) at the European University Institute (EUI) in Florence. He is on leave from the University of Oxford. Martin's research focuses on the economics and politics of international migration, with a strong international comparative dimension. His books include The Price of Rights. Regulating International Labour Migration (Princeton University Press 2013) and Who Needs Migrant Workers? Labour Shortages, Immigration and Public Policy (Oxford University Press 2010, co-edited with B. Anderson). During 2009-12, he was the Director of Oxford University's Migration Observatory. During 2007-14, Martin was a member of the UK's Migration Advisory* Committee (MAC), an independent body of five academic economists tasked to advise the UK government on labour immigration policy.

Jeffrey H. Cohen

A house of mirrors: refugees and reflection

Debates surrounding the refugee crisis pit xenophobes against open-mindedness. Xenophobes emphasize fear; open-minded stress tolerance. I argue that the disagreements create a house of mirrors, reflecting the position of whomever is speaking. We must embrace the facts that define refugees in place of the fantasies and look beyond the latest crisis to emphasize a shared history of mobility.

*Jeffrey H. Cohen, PhD is professor of anthropology at The Ohio State University. He has conducted research on migration, rural development and food in Mexico, Turkey and China with support of the National Science Foundation, National Geographic Society and Fulbright program. His recent books include, Eating Soup without a Spoon: Anthropological Theory and Method in the Real World (2015) and The Cultures of Migration: The Global Nature of Contemporary Movement (2011) written with Ibrahim Sirkeci.*

Karsten Paerregaard

Grasping the Fear: How Migration Speaks to Anti-Globalization Sentiments and Intersects with other Controversial Issues of the Anthropocene

Why are migration, climate and AI among the most controversial issues in the contemporary world? And how do they intersect and speak to the sentiments of anger and fear that currently prevail in Western democratic countries? My talk takes its point of departure in these questions discussing how the perception of global migration has changed in the past decades and why it is now lumped together with other perils such as the natural hazards and semi-human robots. My claim is that the images of the migrant as the human Other, the climate as the natural Other, and the robot as the post-digital Other all tap into conflicting feelings of deception and blame that fuel populist movements. My conclusion is that in a time of ontological fear, migration has become an omen of where we all may end up – in a “no (hu)man’s land” where only the fearless dares to walk.

*Karsten Paerregaard is professor of Anthropology at School of Global Studies, University of Gothenburg. His research is focused on the intersection between migration, environment, climate and culture in the Peruvian Andes. His books include *Linking Separate Worlds. Ferruccio Pastore

The “mixed migration” dilemma and the roots of Europe’s migration and asylum governance crisis

Bari, March 1991: With the arrival of around 20,000 persons fleeing the chaotic Albanian transition, Europe sees, for one of the first times, a new face of international migration. Not any more guest-workers and their families, nor individual dissidents escaping persecution, but masses of disoriented fugitives not easily fitting into the mould of established legal categorisations. What will later be labelled “mixed migration” makes its appearance at the common external border of a group of countries that only a year before – with the signature of the “twin conventions” of Schengen and Dublin - had started building an international regime in the field of migration and asylum. The haphazard reactions of Italian authorities to subsequent waves of the Albanian exodus were an early warning about the genetic dysfunctions of the emerging European governance. But the warning went unobserved and only a quarter of a century later these original regulatory aporias will be fully acknowledged.

The presentation will sketch this crucial and complex history, focusing on large-scale mixed flow as a key challenge for Europe's present and future.

Ferruccio Pastore (PhD, European University Institute, 1996) is the Director of FIERI since May 2009. He has previously been Deputy Director of the international relations and European studies think-tank CeSPI (Centre for International Policy Studies, Rome) and a post-doctoral fellow at the University of Firenze. Besides research, he has worked as an adviser on migration policy issues for Italian institutions and international organisations. He has published extensively on migration and integration policies and politics (full list on www.fieri.it).

Philip L. Martin

Migration Governance in the US under Trump Administration

The US is the country of immigration, with almost 20 per cent of the world's 260 million international migrants. The number two country with international migrants, Germany, has 12 million, a fourth as many as the almost 48 million foreign-born US residents (UN DESA, 2017). The US stands alone among industrial countries in having a quarter of its immigrants, almost 11 million, unauthorised (Passel and Cohn, 2018). President Trump made reducing illegal immigration a priority. Major migration issues today include the fate of programs such as DACA, what to do about Central American families who apply for asylum, and whether to build a wall on the Mexico-US border.

Philip L. Martin is Emeritus Professor of Agricultural Economics at the University of California, Davis and a member of the Commission on Agricultural Workers established by the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986. He is the author of numerous studies and reports on immigration, including Trade and Migration: NAFTA and Agriculture (1993). Prof Martin has guest-edited two issues for Migration Letters on Competitiveness in US and Japan, Migration and Development; comparing US and Mexico, and on Migration Expert Commissions.

The Economic and Social Implications of Reason for Immigration

Reason for immigration (e.g. asylum, family, study, work) relates to multiple factors, such as pre-departure planning, legal rights, return plans, location choices and access to networks, which affect the economic choices of migrants and the restrictions that they face in making those choices. There is a growing body of evidence on the link between reason for migration and labour market integration, entrepreneurship, health outcomes, and remitting behaviour. This presentation discusses the latest research on these links and avenues for future research on this topic.

Carlos Vargas Silva, is Research Director and Associate Professor at the Centre on Migration, Policy and Society (COMPAS), University of Oxford. He is also the Director of the DPhil in Migration Studies at the University. He is currently Principal Investigator for the Horizon 2020 REMINDER project about the implications of migration in Europe. Carlos is also the Principal Investigator for the ECONREF project, which explores the integration of refugees in the UK. Previously, he was Principal Investigator for the Labour Market Impacts of Forced Migration project, which explored the economic consequences of refugee migration in the Great Lakes region of Africa.

In previous years, The Migration Conferences entertained many distinguished names delivering key note speeches including: Joaquin Arango, Complutense University of Madrid, Spain [2018], Samim Akgönül, Strasbourg University, France [2016], Caroline Brettell, Southern Methodist University, USA [2015], Pedro Calado, The High Commissioner for Migration, Lisbon, Portugal [2018], Barry Chiswick, George Washington University, USA [2014], Jeffrey H. Cohen, Ohio State University, USA [2012, 2015], Neli Esipova, Gallup World Poll, USA [2017], Nedim Gürsel, CNRS, CETOBaC & INALCO, France, Turkey [2015], Michelle Leighton, International Labour Organization, Genève,
